A Double Door to Peace

opened a wide door with his declaration that the United States is willing to take part in "unconditional discussions" of a settlement in Viet Nam.

The American attitude until last night, so far as it could be identified, had been that no talks could take place until the Communists had ceased fighting. This was seen as an impossible condition so long as United States forces remained in the country or the Viet Cong troops continued to be successful in their attacks.

The new proposal appears to clear at one leap the lengthy and controversial, problems of a ceasefire and withdrawal. The way is open for Hanoi and Peking to accept the offer and begin talking. That, of course, would still leave the situation far from settlement. The Panmunjom "talks" of the Korean war are still being held, a dozen years tiations would at least present an opportunity for a clear statement of objectives by both sides, with some hope of agreement, and in the meantime it would be reasonable to suppose that neither side would pursue its attacks with more than token persistence.

Mr. Johnson's new position, introduced quietly in the course of his major address, could well be one result of his allies' strong urging for a clarification of United States intentions in Viet Nam and for avoidance of strategy that might escalate the war to proportions dangerous to world peace.

At the same time, however, the President was emphatic in his declaration that the United States will munist hegemony.

DRESIDENT JOHNSON HAS not be defeated, nor grow tired, nor withdraw in Viet Nam, and that a "meaningless agreement" would have no effect on the American program. Although United States power would be used with restraint and wisdom, he said, it would be used.

This combination of toughness and invitation no doubt is calculated to impress the Communists with what they may expect if they continue the fighting, and what they may receive if they adopt a conciliatory policy. The prescribed state of independence and freedom for South Viet Nam would remove both American and Northern forces and influence in the future.

Mr. Johnson's open door was in reality a double one. With his somewhat conditional offer of unconditional discussions he proposed a vast aid fund for Southeast Asia to which the United States would contribute $1 billion when the program got started. North Viet Nam would also after the cease-fire. But active nego- be eligible for assistance when circumstances made this possible, and an immediate start on the co-operative program of development, led by U.N. Secretary-General U Thant and with Russian participation, was urged.

This program, further clarified. could provide a considerable incentive for North Viet Nam. It apparently would open South Viet Nam resources and markets to normal trade with the North and create, with large outside financial aid, a much more prosperous situation throughout a free Southeast Asia. Red China's reception of this plan, however, can be anticipated. If successful, such a program would destroy any plans by Peking for Com-

'On the Side of Most Angels'

THE least that may be said of the Speech from the Throne is that the Federal government, despite premature expectations in some quarters, has no plans for withering away at an early date. Minisunwearying in good works, have prepared an agenda for Parliament which contemplates a wide range of new or expanded programs, some national, some requiring the cooperation of the provinces.

This is a much-tried government but it is obviously not a tired one. It will remarkable if Parliament can complete its assigned labors in much less than a year. There may, of course, be an election within that period but, if such an appeal is forced by the opposition, the speech guarantees that the government will be found solidly on the side of the more popular angels.

Carry-Overs

There are many good carry-overs from the last session and some of them certainly deserve high priority. An example, and a controversial one, is the railway legislation inspired by report of the MacPherson Royal Com-mission. That has lately been the subject of some committee study. Until an act is passed the country will have to go on paying interim instead of purposeful subsidies to the railways

Procedural Reform

The work of Parliament might, of course, be speeded up through procedur-al reforms, based upon the Westminster practice of appropriate limitations on the various stages of debate. It is notable here that the government now to take responsibility for reform proposals, based in part on studies already made by the procedural committee and in part on its own studies of the British rules. This would seem to be a priority matter because success would make Parliament's overall task a good deal more manageable.

The influence of the Economic Council of Canada is apparent in many paragraphs of the throne speech. For example, the government's anti-poverty program looks to the expansion or amendment of a half-dozen existing schemes involving regional development, industrial expansion, re-employand training re-development of rural areas, renewal of blighted urban areas and so on.

Clarification comes later, often the Prime Minister's speech on leader's day. What, for example, is the public to make of the Company of Young Canadians; which is evidently to excite the daring not only abroad, like the American peace corps, but also in projects of social and economic development here at home.

It is risky to assume that a throne to an economic and cultural system that of the government's plans, however frequently that word may be placed in the mouth of His Excellency. University boards of governors are forced to raise fees because there is not enough money available to meet operat-

A university has four main sources of money:

Provincial government.

Industry.

Students.

Industry, especially this year, is fre quently asked to contribute to capital expenditures. It responds most generously. It is unfair to expect any industry of the universities as well. Students expect to contribute to their are willing to de cause students are the most vulnerable of the four sources, it is easiest for boards of governors to pick on them for more money. Most students depend on summer

It does not provide the universities with minimum requirements. Unless these requirements are met the prov-ince of B.C. will have third-rate universities producing inadequately and badly trained graduates. The government trained graduates. London: The new town of New Tipperary in Ireland established by tenants evicted from a large estate will open soon when finishing touches are completed on the m o s t important buildings. recent article that knowledgeable Americans know more about the state of the nation in Canada than most Canadians perficially this may be correct, but an American is not a Canadian and can not feel as such. Underlying the apparent indifference to our problem is a strong, sturdy, commonsense attitude, distinctly Canadian in character, that

A Canadian

It sometimes seems that Mr. Hutchison, who is so able, is perhaps almost too sophisticated. The Canadian may be slower to react to situations, which could be mistaken for indifference, but one thing is certain: when the issues are resolved he will be up there front and centre, ready to do battle. side you will find both French and Eng-lish Canadians. As far as our ethnic differences are concerned these will be settled by giving a little, getting a little, and believing in Canada a lot. Our approaches may be different but our interests are identical, our goal unquestioned.

Our present troubles seem to stem from our inability to bridge the gap between the old and the new. The Con-servative party had an ideal opportunity in 1958 but Mr. Diefenbaker could not see the greater needs of the nation over his own overweening and vaulting ambition. His clarion call became a mere braying of platitudes and he bogged down, and the nation with him, in the dross of his own politicking.

A tragic figure but no less tragic in a way than Mr. Pearson. Here is an ideal elder statesman, sincere, far-seeing, and almost steeped in self-immolation, qualities which make for rather eavy going in the field. The image that both these men have created is not the one that a young, vigorous, and potentially great nation in a rapidly changing world needs, and which would fire the imagination. The Conservative party had able young men in 1958 who were cast aside to satisfy the personal ambition of one man, brilliant and wise in the ways of politics but as it turned out sadly lacking in statesmanship, to the sorrow and detriment of Canada. No doubt the Liberal party will search for a younger man of the right qualities which will epitomize the 'new horizons' we face and free us from the present morass of the anachristic and costly form of government are presently laboring under. But make no mistake, Canada may be floundering but it is not foundering. When we again find our feet we will surge ahead as a distinct and vital entity in the world of nations .- "E.W.H."

Changes Coming In Spain

By PHIL NEWSOM

In Madrid, Barcelona, Seville and other Spanish cities, university students and police clash over student demands for the right of "free assembly."

In Madrid a secretly circulated petition which later is presented to the government demands freedom of association, the right to strike and freedom of information and expression.

It is signed by more than 1,000 Spaniards, including professors, clergymen, lawyers, students, laborers and others.

In the northern province of Asturia, disgruntled miners storm a police station. It is the first time since the end of the civil war in 1939 that a mob has attacked a Spanish police station.

This is the other side of the coin in a Spain which gradually is emerging from 100 years of isolation behind the barrier of the Pyrenees, its economy booming like nothing since the treasure galleons of the Spanish Main, but internally still torn by doubts.

Years of Chaos

These doubts spring from the century of chaos which preceded the end of the civil war. They spring also from doubts of what is to happen in "The Succession," the day when something or someone will have to follow Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

Within Franco's c a b inet there are men who chafe at the slow pace of the development of Spanish political and civil liberties, but even they plead for time to establish demoeratic processes.

But despite the snail's pace of changes within the Franco regime, changes are being Franco himself has spoken rather vaguely of a referendum to give the Spanish people a chance to decide their own future form of government.

And while the Falange, at least during Franco's lifetime, probably also will remain Spain's only legal political party, there also is talk that some sort of opposition group will be given a voice.

Recent strikes have been handled with kid gloves and the labor ministry has encouraged collective bargaining between labor and management, in effect by-passing the powerful state-controlled syndicates which have a monopoly on representation of workers' interests.

Word From Rome

From Rome has come word that Spain should not be "afraid of religious liberty." In effect it was a warning to Spanish churchmen that they should not oppose steps to ease religious conditions for Spain's Protestants.

In advance of and perhaps contributing to pressures for liberalization of Spain's political and civil rights is the liberalization of Spain's economy.

Tourism is Spain's most important industry. Spanish exporters are winning new markets. Spaniards at home are demanding more automobiles and television sets.

Perhaps the greatest departure with the past is the government decision to broaden cultural and economic exchanges with the Soviet Union and other Communist countries of Eastern Europe.

Spanish and Russian dancers will exchange visits. A Madrid soccer team received permission to play in Bucharest.

These are things that are occurring in Spain today. But among knowledgeable Spaniards, the question is tomorrow. What is to happen in

ARE GOVERNORS STILL NEEDED?

Guelph Daily Mercury
The value of the provincial lieutenant-governorships is debatable. This is a dusty topie but has been revived in the Ontorio Legislature by a Liberal MP, James Trotter. He would have the lieutenant-governor's functions, such as they are, absorbed by the Chief Justice of the province. This very idea has been ventilated at intervals for many years. Mitchell Hepburn favored it, when Liberal oppo-

Mr. Trotter, who is quite right in terming the lieutenant-governorship "more or a less a hangover from the days when we were a colony," ran into sputters of colonial-tinged rage from the Tory benches. The government whip, John White, from the London hometown of Premier Robarts, shouted: "You want a republic!" This may not be the most inane statement of the session, but it holds the title

Changes India Desperately Needs Aid

As Population Outruns Food

WASHINGTON — While the world's attention if focused on Viet Nam, many experts here and elsewhere are convinced that no country deserves more searching attention—and new help—than India.

Despite a great effort, it has failed to make the economic progress expected of it in recent years. It faces a constant threat of widespread famine unless there are continued and large food shipments from the United States.

India's currency is heavily overvalued and its foreign exchange situation just short of desperate. Its population is increasing at an alarming rate.

At present, a vast amount of research is being done in connection with India's problems. Chief interest is focused on a world bank team in India that is preparing a report to guide the bank and the 10 nations that make up the free world consortium that aids India.

The consortium is scheduled to meet in Paris in mid-May for a preliminary discussion of India's fourth five-year plan, which begins in March, 1966

Meanwhile, experts in the U.S. state department, in the British and other interested governments and in leading universities are spending long hours seeking a solution to the problems that beset the largest free country in Asia, a land with one-seventh of the world's population.

New Efforts

American officials in New Delhi are repeatedly emphasizing to the Indian government the necessity for new efforts to increase food production, to expand small industrial enterprises, to work for price stability and a better distribution of food supplies, and to improve living standards generally.

The deep-seated resistance

The deep-seated resistance to change in the Indian bureaucracy and its rigid ideological views must be overcome before the economy can begin to move of its own momentum, the experts maintain. An American suggestion to establish a new agency of development to get around the old bureaucracy, as FDR would have done, has not appealed to Indian leaders.

If it were not for the rapid population growth from 360 million in 1951 to 480 million today and an estimated 550 million (by 1971), India might look with some pride on its accomplishments since it began its first five year plan in 1951.

Industrial production has more than doubled. Steel capacity has increased five times. Coal production had doubled. Electric generating capacity has quadrupled. Malaria, which once incapacitated 100 million people, has been almost e l i m in a t ed. Three times as many children are in school,

Yet the number of unemployed, illiterate, ill-housed have increased in the last five years. Food prices have increased as the population explosion has reduced the per capita food supply.

In agriculture, there has been a serious, even alarming, failure. Production is up 40 per cent, not enough to keep pace with population growth and improved diets. Hard-toget foreign exchange, desperately needed for machinery and other industrial products, must be used to buy food overseas.

But the production goals of the third five year plan will not be met, and unemployment will be higher at the end of the plan than at the start.

Vast Potential

With a per capita income of only about 75 to 80 dollars a year, some persons have argued that vast new aid from outside and improvement at home would still make it impossible for India to move into the modern world and to compete successfully with Communist China. Most experts on India do not agree. They think it has a vast potential.

The experience of developing countries like Taiwan, South Korea, Greece, Israel, even Pakistan, has shown that they can generate their own forward development programs after their economies begin to move.

In other words, after an economy gets beyond the mere subsistence level it usually can produce its own momentum. Economic aid programs are being ended yet growth is continuing in a number of countries where per capita income is less than 200 dollars a year.

Britain Weighs Decision

To Grant Guiana Freedom

government," a long-time nonofficial expert on India cried in exasperation the other day, meaning that it is stifled by outmoded dogma and a rigid bureaucracy.

Freer Economy

There may be disagreement on many aspects of the Indian problem, but there appears to be almost universal agreement among Indian experts here, in London and in the leading universities that the basic need is a freer economy. Fewer controls would enable Indian businessmen and foreign investors to generate more energy and initiative for growth.

Pakistan, India's rival, is today making encouraging progress although its per capita income is not substantially above India's.

There are several reasons why Pakistan is moving ahead more rapidly. United States aid to Pakistan has been about twice as large on a per capita basis than it has been to India.

Pakistani businessmen have been given a freer hand to develop their own enterprises. Agriculture has been more productive. Pakistan has been more receptive to expert advice from foreign economists.

In some ways, India may have been too ambitious. It has undertaken many big development projects that require foreign exchange not only to build but to operate. A new steel mill needs new parts and materials for years after it is completed, and many of these must be paid for abroad. Projects like dams do not provide prompt returns into the economy even if their long-range value may be beyond dispute.

ond dispute. Under the pressure for such purchases abroad, the Indian government has increased restrictions on imports to save

This has led in turn to severe internal controls on investment and private enterprise that have had a stifling effect on the initiative and vitality of businessmen. Many factories are not operating at capacity because of their inability to buy parts and raw materials abroad.

Program Loans

To help overcome this problem, some of the donor countries are proposing a shift from so-called project loans loans to finance dams, railroads, steel mills, fertilizer factories—to what are called program loans.

Program lending is designed to finance a variety of essential imports needed to keep the whole economy operating at capacity rather than to build new dams and steel mills.

Many students of the problem say that the new loans should be made available to India only if it agrees to undertake serious reforms and to eliminate a large number of controls.

"Both India and Pakistan have brilliant entrepeneurial skill," one expert said. "This skill must be freed in both countries to the maximum possible extent."

Prof. Edward S. Mason of Harvard recently wrote that "Indian planning, in general, has been allergic to allowing prices to perform their classical function."

Instead, he said, there has been a "heavy reliance" on control of distribution. The pricing system has been distorted to accomplish various social and political aims.

Aware of Need

India recently agreed to permit private investment in fertilizer plants and to invite American firms to play a role in fertilizer distribution, one indication that new Delhi is aware of the need for reform. As Prof. Mason wrote, "There is evidence in recent years of a marked change in attitudes in India in the direction of greater reliance on the market and classical pricing proce-

India has managed to survive many crises in its long history, but it has never before had the population explosion it has today or been faced so directly by the challenge from China.

That is why so many experts are urging a "save India" campaign by the leading western nations and Japan to prevent deterioration and perhaps revolution on the subcontinent.

In return for new aid these experts would insist on dramatic reforms in India and a liberalization of its economy.

period of danger was coming after the end of Hitler's war. one of the favorite occupations, of economists was to forecast the date of the coming world depression. As the depression never came, those who had busied themselves with forecasting it gradually moved over to forecasting something else. It has now become fashionable assume that economics have become a skilled enough science to ensure that nothing like a 1931 will ever occur again. This is flattering to economists, but unfortunately also irrational

First, it may well be true-I myself think it is-that the teachings of John Maynard Keynes and others have shown economic advisers to governments how they can pull out of a recession, once it occurs. But we have not adopted, world-wide, the sorts of policies that Keynes taught were necessary to actually avoid recessions. The world currency system, in particular, is archaic. So it is logical to suppose that one day recession will start to come, and will initially plunge deeper than any of the minor interruptions to prosperity we have had since the war.

Danger Signals

When this happens, there will be a brief period when scaremongers will say that a spectre like that of the long-lasting mass employment of the 1930s may lie just round the corner. By that time, I will be chirruping with the optimists again; but for the moment I believe that the

Danger Spot

Japan, where there is a little wavelet of quite serious business bankruptcies in pro-gress now, is another danger spot; in some respects the financial position of Japan today-it is dependent to a dangerous extent on short-term foreign cerdits - is worrying similar to the financial position of central Europe in 1929, and it was central Europe that helped to start the big depression of the 1930s rolling. Per-haps most important of all, 1965-66 looks to me like being a pretty bleak period for the - developed countries, which rely on the maintenance of reasonably high prices for primary products.

Those prices are threatened today because the United States and Britain, the guardians of the two big currencies international trade, are both ng to be fighting throughout 1965 against what they regard payments crises-and both at the same time. Each of them is therefore seeking to cut vn its outflow of funds to the outside world; each of the two so-called reserve curren countries wants to stop creating any more reserves for other countries.

Severe Squeeze

This must at least threaten to give a deflationary twist to the immediate course of world trade. The squeeze on world liquidity will become severer still if there should be continuing speculation against the two key currencies: speculation against the dollar in favor of gold, and speculation against poor, battered sterling in favor of practically anything.

This is not a forecast of inevitable disaster. I repeat that the odds are still, on any count, against the probability of a serious world financial crisis this year. But it is worrying that this—as I see it —fifth period of contingent danger since the end of the war has come in a year when those in charge of the main economic and financial ministries in the United States and Britain are going to be very new and in some cases relatively inexperienced men; and when in continental Europe too there is no economic or finance minister of outstandingly reassuring stature.

3. BETTER RUSTPROOFING

Exclusive Deep-Dip Rustproofing, continually improved since its introduction nine years ago, is the world's best rustproofing method. The body of every Rambler is dipped to its roofline seven separate times in rustproofing to seal off every nook and cranny from the ravages of rust.

4. BETTER PAINT

Rambler's exclusive three coats of Lustre-Gard Enamel resist wear and tear, season after season.

Mr. Bonner urged the board to at least modify the terms of the Alberta and Southern deal. He said that even at its higher cost British Columbia gas cost British Columbia gas should be mixed with the Alberta gas to sell at a better price.

There was a time a few years ago when Fielder looked in danger of becoming deceased. Seattle was playing Vancouver, a team which liked to knock people down and step on them.

Art Chapman was the chief Vancouver sadist and he used to holler "run at them!"

On one play Fielder was spun around. He rocked on his skates, fighting to regain balance. Chapman leaned over the boards and shouted to Dale Anderson, a crew-cut member of Chappie's Cosa Nostra, "run at him!"

Later Millar said "Fielder often fakes a pass and then lets it go, trying to get it between my legs. I had to go with him. Remember when Johnny Bower got a tongue lashing from his coach last season for going to the assistance of an injured opponent? Imlach, long since reconciled with the press, explained the incident Wednesday. He wasn't objecting to the principle of Bower's kindly act but to the man involved. The player whose collision with the end boards precipitated the incident was John Ferguson, the Montreal right winger, who was a stick boy for Vancouver Canucks of the Western League when Bower played for them 11 years ago. The 40-year-old netminder is no longer happy about the way Ferguson handles a hockey stick. He and team-mate Dave Balon were both involved in goalmouth collisions with Rower in Tuesday night's game, in which the Leafs came up with a 3-2 overtime victory after two successive losses.

"They have a habit of coming at the goalie with their ks," Bower complained. "They should be given charging penalties ' Imlach said Ferguson had employed similar tactics in the

May is the acknowledged "moving month," but three young Victoria golfers are making their jump ahead of time Bill Wakeham, Earl Francis and Roy Chappell, all reared on Victoria courses, are heading for assistant professional jobs

Wakeham, twice winner of the Times Island Open and B.C. Amateur championships, this week accepted a position with the Canyon Meadows Club in Calgary. He plans to leave next week and intends to take up permanent residence in Calgary.

Francis, two years out of unior ranks, left Tuesday for an assistant pro's job in Sudbury, Chappell, an assistant at Oak Bay for the past five years, will leave later this month for a similar post with the Wedgewood Valley course near Chicago.

Their leaving will put a noticeable dent in the district's ranks but all Victoria golfers wish them good luck in their new jobs.

EARL FRANCIS Wakeham's absence, in particular, will be felt. The 24-yearold Gorge Vale ace has brought Victoria more golfing glory than any other in recent times. In addition to his local triumphs. Bill represented Victoria on Canada's World Cup team in 1962 and played in the Commonwealth and America's Cup matches the

The trio's move to other jobs should be particularly pleasing to Joe Pryke, the gentle pro at Gorge Vale. All three are Gorge grads and Pryke did much to mould their golfing abilities. It's not very often one professional gets a chance to see three of his proteges graduate in a single month.

* * The most exasperating part of a pro's job is getting young coffers to heed advice.

If you want legal advice, you go to a lawyer. For golf lessons, you contact a professional. It's senseless to hire experts if you on't intend to follow their advice.

That's how it is with two local individuals. One has a poor grip, the other needs to correct his swing, according to their respective teachers. Yet both tend to ignore the professional ade because "it might affect" their present game. It is true changes tend to create immediate effects. But is it not also possible that any corrections today may result in greater benefits (and better medal rounds) in years to come? * * *

With the likes of Art Donaldson, Wakeham, Laurie Carroll and Dick Munn on the sidelines, Ron MacLeod becomes the big favorite to win it all in the Times Vancouver Island Open. Laurie Kerr, Norm Boden and Vaughn Trapp loom as Mac-

Leod's greatest threats but Wakeham insists "Ron should win it because it's a 36-hole final."

Wakeham infers the best hopes for an upset lie in the 18hole rounds. Which, incidentally, is what Sunday's second round at Oak Bay will be!

MacLeod faces Gorge Vale amateur Allister Fulton. Kerr draws Cowichan's Gordie Whan in what could be a very interest-ing match. Boden meets Karl Zwick, another Gorge amateur, while the dark-horse Mr. Trapp tangles with Mike Kolb in Surday's other key matches.

Casper, who has trimmed 35 pounds by dieting, suggested this could be his year.

'I'm playing well and never felt better,'' Casper, the 1950 U.S. Open winner, declared. Wall, now. 41, had some credentals going for him, too. He won the Masters back in 1959 and since then has been handicapped by injuries.

You never know when it's going to rain. You never know when a friendly road is going to turn into something wet and slick and treacherous.

That's the whole idea behind the rain tire. You're ready for it whenever and wherever it happens.

On a wet, slippery road: 30% shorter stops.

With a set of rain tires on your car, you'll be able to stop 30% shorter on a rain-slicked road than you could when your car was brand

(That's how much difference there is, on a wet road, between the rain tire and the tires that originally came with the '64, '63 or '62 cars. If you own a '61 or earlier car, the improvement will be even more dramatic.)

On a wet curve, you'll hold the road 50% better than you could when your car was brand new.

On a wet curve: 50% more skid resistance.

And when you accelerate on a wet road, you'll have 20% better traction than you had when your car was brand new.

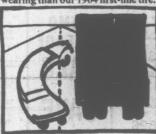

Figures can't tell you, though, what it feels like to drive on rain

Your car will handle in the rain like it never handled before: Surer of itself. More responsive. Making contact with a good, solid hunk of road that each rain tire has squee-

But what's it like when the sun comes out?

We knew you'd ask that. And we're glad you did. Because you'll have even better control in passing or in cornering than you had when your car was brand new. On a dry road.

Other side benefits: Less wander when you drive down a straight road at 70 or 80. Practically no "trolley tracking" when you ride in and out of an expansion strip on the highway. About 10% longer. wearing than our 1964 first-line tire.

On a dry road: surer control when you pass or corner.

If this tire sounds just too good to be true, and you expect to have to pay the price in a rough or noisy ride (or in money), you're wrong.

It comes as Original Equipment on some of the most prestigious 1965 cars. Which means that it has to be quiet and smooth-riding, because there's nobody with a more sensitive bottom than the test drivers who evaluate the new models in Detroit.

The ride: So quiet and smooth it's original equipmen on many '65s.

The price of the rain tire is as reassuring as the tire itself: about the same price as any other leading maker's first-line tire.

The official name of the rain tire is the "Dominion Royal Laredo." None genuine without.

So don't give the dealer a hard time if the tire he brings out says Laredo. Give him a hard time if it doesn't.

Dominion Royal

If it's sure-footed on a wet road, imagine the control you'll have on a dry road.

Two particles the size of a pinhead proved under examination to be meteorite, said Dr. John Galt, director of the Okanagan Radio Astrophysical Observatory near this Okanagan city.

They will be sent along with four other smaller fragments to the geological survey department in Ottawa, Tests for radioactivity should establish positive identification, Dr. Galt

The fragments were found Monday in snow about nine miles north of Sicamous. miles north of Sicamous. Searchers had been dragging with powerful magnets in an attempt to find the meteor that frightened and surprised dozens of interior residents last Wednesday.
Dr. Galt said the two larger fragments have a pitted surface and appear to have glassy fibres sticking out of them.

"This would have occurred when they melted and streamed off the meteor," he said.

Scientists now believe the meteor hit in the Seymour Arm area, about 30 miles north of Sicamous. The search for it continues.

TECHNOLOGY TAKES OVER WOODS ...

FOR B.C.'s BIGGEST LOGGING FIRM

Everything's Edible to Modern Forest Giant

Times Staff Reporter

Paul Bunyan cruises the woods today under a new name-Technology.

The legendary old logger has gone so modern that, under his new name, he falls and bucks thou-sands of board feet of timber in minutes, yards it out of the bush just as quickly and rushes the logs to booming grounds at 30 miles an hour in 100-ton

He leaves behind him only about 100 cubic feet of wood per acre lying on the ground-slightly more than a station wagon load.

And, continuing his frugality, he'll soon be back to plant more than 400 seedlings in that acre which, after careful tending, will produce more wood in 90 years than it took nature 200 years to grow in the same space.

Technology also works hard in town as well as in the woods. At the mills, he will strip the bark off huge logs within seconds (and use the bark for power plant fuel) and then peel them into plywood veneer, saw them into lumber or shingles or grind and cook them into pulp within a matter of hours.

He uses every particle of sawdust and wood chip—by pulp-ing it—and tries to be as clean as possible, skimming off tons of wood fibre each day in a settlement tank which otherwise would go into the salt chuck as a super-fine solution of cellulose and water. (The scum is dried into a solid and used for power This is the industrial giant I met during a two-day tour this week of the continent's biggest concentration of forestry tech-nology—the MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Ltd. complex in the Alberni Valley. Even as a layman, I was able to perceive that the forestry industry of B.C. has undergone a thorough-going revolution. For instance: They don't cry "timber" any more in the woods-because ith power saws fallers no longer work in gangs and no two Individuals are within reach of the same falling tree.

The "glamor boy" of the woods, the high-rigger, has disappeared because standing trees no longer are topped and rigged as yarding spars. They've been replaced by self-propelled steel spars that are more manoeuvrable and set up faster.

Yarding no longer is a slow and difficult operation. A taskforce of a mechanical yarder, loading crane and waiting truck (each of the three pieces of equipment costing an average $70,000) keeps operators, choker gang and marker on the run—the marker standing on the high truck cab guiding placement of a log on the trailer, jumping up to hit the end with a marking hammer and jumping back onto the cab roof just in time to start guiding another log into place;

(The next step already is in sight as a result of current experiments—huge balloons guided by wire tracks to lift logs out of the bush and onto carriers;)

Gigantic trucks, powered with 550-horsepower diesels and capable of carrying 100 tons of wood, roar up and down the steep company roads—using automatic drive instead of gearwhich gives better downhill control;

In the mills, safety signs abound in an astonishing profusion. The obsession with safety has paid off everywhere but is most noticeable in saw areas. The shorn finger stumps that were the tragic trademark of shingle sawyers is a thing

Immensely powerful and ingenious machinery has been veloped to speed the conversion of timber into wood products.

Words are inadequate to describe the impact these machines make on a layman but I'll try to convey the impressions made by only one.

Picture yourself in an instrument-packed control room with a picture window of armor plate glass giving a view into a steel chamber about the size of an average bank lobby, its floor an uneven mass of long steel rollers, chain conveyors and lugs-everything built oversize.

With a tremendous clattering, a log about three feet thick and 40 feet long-weighing up to eight tons-bounces into the chamber, is kicked by the lugs in a high are onto the rotating spindles which make it birl a fantastic jig.

(The operator, just to demonstrate his control over the huge log, made it leap about like a toothpick—producing an eerie incongruity for human senses. Our eyes told us the porpoising log must be some super-light balsa wood. But our ears and the shock-shaken floor under our feet told us

It certainly weighed many tons.)

Another set of lugs, kicked the log out of the chambers

In came another log from the right, and this time the operator demonstrated the terrifying power of the water jet. Stopping the spindles so that the log did not revolve, he zipped the nozzle down the log-splitting it lengthwise in half!

enough even for Paul Bunyan.

We toured the pulp and paper mill, plywood mill, saw mill and shingle mill-but that was only part of the MBPR complex in the valley.

All told, the company has about 4,000 employees in the nplex who receive $25 million in pay each year while ng about 600 million log feet of timber which sell for about $165 million annually, mostly in the export market.

When the current expansion programs in several of the plants are completed this year, the whole shehang will represent almost $200 million-worth of capital investment

Running the whole show is J. R. Forrest (and everyone does call him Jack) who was born and raised in the valley and went to work as an ordinary hourly-paid sawmill hand after the Second World War (following one year at University of B.C. as a returned veteran.)

Likeable, hard-working and diligently pursuing short courses in training, he worked up to foreman, general foreman, production superintendent, plant manager and now area manager within two decades.

At 47, he represents another aspect of the technological revolution in the industry—youthful personnel.

Young men with ability move up the ladder very quickly at all levels—just now because the industry is growing at a lizzy pace. There are simply too many openings proliferating to fill them with seasoned veterans on a more-or-less senority sys-This was not only evident at the top, but also at the workingman's level. The million-dollar machinery of the pulp plant, for instance, was operated in the main by youths in their twenties.

A paper maker trainee, for example, can move up by hiring at a new pulp mill (they've been opening in batches for the past few years and about a dozen more are in the works for the in a higher category. The same opportunity develops when his own plant expands.

It's possible for a high school graduate to work up to a No. 1 papermaker position-and a wage of about $1,000 a month by time he's in his mid-twenties.

This facet of the business will become more pronounced as the new mills now under construction search for personnel.

Another quiet revolution of the industry is taking place on the forest floor itself—management of tree plantations by professional foresters who are improving on nature through planting programs (both hand and helicopter-seeding), spacing schedules. ing programs to give good trees an even better chance to grow, fertilization experiments and introduction of new species. This new aspect won't be visible to the present generation but the next one will see the benefits in an enormously increased fuctivity from B.C.'s forest lands.

Summing up the tour, I'd say I gained a new appreciation of All-Sooke's logging sports festival. It's a living museum in which you can see the sweat-and-strain techniques that you will never find in the woods again.

The East came West, Wednesday, when the party accom-Friendship (Miss Hiroko Koba of Tokyo), visited Victoria. Never was the blend of east and west so delightfully apparent than in a diminutive woman photographer called Miss Akiko Domoto, also of Here is a woman in her twenties who, apart from the present Canadian trip, has never set foot outside Japan. Yet, on getting her first glimpse of daffodils, Miss Domoto waxed poetical, quoting Wordsworth's famous poem on the spring flower!

It appears that Wordsworth and Tennyson both figure prominently in Japanese texts books and the vivacious photographer describes them as "my favorites."

Looking as fragile as a cherry blossom in her kimono at Wednesday evening's recep-tion at the Empress Hotel, Miss Domoto also sported a rash of freckles to deny any illusion that she's a "hot house Says Miss Domoto: "I'm one of the laziest women in Japan, I can't be bothered to protect my face when I go skiing, sailing or playing tennis.

FRECKLED FACE

"As you know, in my country many marriages are still arranged. When a friend of mine introduced me to one of her boy friends, she told me I should get rid of my freckles if I hoped to get married. When I marry, my husband will just have to like freckles!"

And, although she wears a kimono with an inherent grace, this young woman is just at home in a working rig of slacks and shirt.

Another quixotic twist is in the camera she uses. While most North Americans and Europeans are quick to admit

"My country makes good cameras for 'stills' but when it comes to taking movies you can't beat one like the type I

Originally a reporter with the Toyko Broadcasting Service, Miss Domoto broke into the photography field when the Olympic Games were held in "The male photographers were not allowed in the Women's Village so I was trained to use a camera and sent off to do the job."

She must have done a good one because she's been shutter clicking ever since.

FIRST IMPRESSIONS

She's fascinated with her first glimpse of Canada and wants to come back.

"I heard that Canada was 27 times larger than Japan when I was at home but I never realized how vast it was.

"The things that struck me most . . . the friendliness of the people . . . the youngness of the West, everything seems to be growing so fast here . . . how different Canadians are from the Americans, so much quieter.'

INTERNATIONAL EFFORT

MILADY'S PLEASURE

It is today's world of high-speed transportation and communications that makes possible many of the flattering and yet practical garments now at Gordon Ellis Limited for your Spring

For example, the versatile Italian doubleknits, ideal for almost any occasion, are the product of many hands in many countries:

From Australia come the fine Merino wools whose extraordinary softness and elasticity allow the fabric to maintain its shape and line perfectly even after long wearing.

In Italy, after being spun into top grade worsted yarns, these wools are dyed in a myriad of fashionable shades and knitted on machines designed and produced in Gérmany.

Many Italian suit and dress designs are too flamboyant, and the colour combinations too startling, to suit the tastes of the discriminating ladies of this area. So, top flight designers here in North America, study trends and requirements of the Pacific Northwest, produce designs specifically tuned to your demands and fly with them to Italy, where carefully selected manufacturers translate them into garments which can be worn with pride and confidence.

Ideal for Easter, and in fact for all-yearround wearing, we now have a wide selection in both two and three-piece suit styles and dresses.

Greatest Story Needs Edit Work

LONDON (Reuters) - Movie critics here today described Hollywood's The Greatest Story Ever Told as a bore.

"The longest as well as the greatest story ever told" was Daily Mail critic Cecil Wilson's verdict on the three-hour, 20-minute Bible epic produced and directed by George Stevens fol-lowing its opening here.

"Hollywood should stick to entertainment and leave the Good Book well alone," said The Mirror's Donald Zec.

Robert Ottaway in The Daily Sketch said "The Greatest Story Ever Told comes close to being the bore of the century.

Leonard Mosley in The Daily Express: "The result is, I am afraid, that though you don't augh, you do yawn.

The Times: "It proves to be Ioreseeably, a worthy, solid, respectable, almost unbearable monument to ghastly good taste. "But at three hours and 20 minutes it is deadly slow."

The block starts with "Mister Mayor" at 8 a.m., and ends with "My.

Friend Flicka" at 1 p.m.

The fully-animated "Tom & Jerry" cartoons, depicting the adventures of the redoubtable cat-and-mouse team, will be seen on television for the first

.CBS-TV consider capture of this cartoon series a real coup. They have been delighting movie audiences for years and were voted the top moneymaking short subject of the year over nine other candidates in a recent poll.

Stephen

The cartoon series was created by Hanna-Barbera, who are responsible for Huckleberry Hound, Quick Draw McGraw, Yogi Bear and other assorted cartoon characters on television

The "Lassie series" will involve rebroadcasts from the era when Jon Provost starred as Timmy, and June Lockhart and Hugh Reilly starred as his parents. The upcoming season's Saturday morning lineup for the moppets will look like this:

8-9, Mister Mayor; 9-9:30, Alvin; 9:30-10, Tennes-ce Tuxedo; 10-10:30, Mighty Mouse; 10:30-11, Linus the Lionhearted; 11-11:30, Tom & Jerry, 11:30-12 noon, Quick

Servicemen with the United Nations' Emergency Force in the Middle East will be visited by the CBC' fifth annual concert party in May. The concert will present 15 stage shows during a 16-day tour starting May 12.

It will play before servicemen from Canada, Yugoslavia, Sweden, Brazil, India and Denmark. George Armstrong, captain of the Toronto Maple Leafs hockey team, will accompany the troupe. CBC radio and television personality Gordie Tapp will be master of ceremonies. The show also includes a jazz octet; Miss, Canada, Linda Douma, of Sidney; fiddler Al Cherney, folk-singer Simone Dina, singer Tommy Common, singer-dancer Daniele Dorice and a baton act by Joan and Barbara Lounsbury.

It will be a matter of rotund replacing rotund on CBS-TV during the summer months in the period between 7:30-8:30 p.m.

Al Hirt will star in a new summer musical variety series while the Jackle Gleason Show is on hiatus.

The series will feature the many different vocal and instrumental sounds popular in America today. There will be such regional music as New Orleans, Sar Francisco and Chicago jazz, the Nashville country and western sounds, gospel music and Broadway show need plenty of water and mud to protect them from Africa's tropical heat.

And to prevent future guessing, Hirt weighs 299

Each hippo is estimated to eat 400 pounds of fodder daily, mainly bushes, grass and small trees, leaving little food for other animals.

Game Warden Nicholas Rousseau says importers have shown interest in hippo meat as a delicacy and a few sample cans have been exported.

TECHNOLOGY TAKES OVER WOODS ...

Everything's Edible to Modern Forest Giant

Times Staff Reporter

Paul Bunyan cruises the woods today under a new name—Technology.

The legendary old logger has gone so modern that, under his new name, he falls and bucks thousands of board feet of timber in minutes, yards it out of the bush just as quickly and rushes the logs to booming grounds at 30 miles an hour in 100-ton

He leaves behind him only about 100 cubic feet of wood per acre lying on the ground-slightly more than a station wagon load.

And, continuing his frugality, he'll soon be back to plant more than 400 seedlings in that acre which, after careful tending. will produce more wood in 90 years than it took nature 200 years to grow in the same space.

Technology also works hard in town as well as in the woods. At the mills, he will strip the bark off huge logs within seconds (and use the bark for power plant fuel) and then peel them into plywood veneer, saw them into lumber or shingles or grind and cook them into pulp within a matter of hours.

He uses every particle of sawdust and wood chip by pulp-ling it—and tries to be as clean as possible, skimming off tons wood fibre each day in a settlement tank which otherwise would go into the salt chuck as a super-fine solution of cellulose and water. (The scum is dried into a solid and used for power

This is the industrial giant I met during a two-day tour this week of the continent's biggest concentration of forestry tech-nology—the MacMillan, Bloedej and Powell River Ltd. complex in the Alberni Valley.

Even as a layman, I was able to perceive that the forestry industry of B.C. has undergone a thorough-going revolu-

They don't cry "timber" any more in the woods because ith power saws fallers no longer work in gangs and no two Individuals are within reach of the same falling tree:

The "glamor boy" of the woods, the high-rigger, has disappeared because standing trees no longer are topped and rigged as yarding spars. They've been replaced by self-propelled steel spars that are more manoeurable and set up faster;

Yarding no longer is a slow and difficult operation. A taskforce of a mechanical yarder, loading crane and waiting truck (each of the three pieces of equipment costing an average $70,000) keeps operators, choker gang and marker on the the marker standing on the high truck cab guiding placement of a log on the trailer, jumping up to hit the end with a marking hammer and jumping back onto the cab roof just in time to start guiding another log into place;

(The next step already is in sight as a result of curre experiments-huge balloons guided by wire tracks to lift logs out of the bush and onto earriers;)

Gigantic trucks, powered with 550-horsepower diesels and capable of carrying 100 tons of wood, roar up and down the steep company roads-using automatic drive instead of gearshift which gives better downhill control:

In the mills, safety signs abound in an astonishing profusion. The obsession with safety has paid off everywhere but is most noticeable in saw areas. The shorn finger stumps that were the tragic trademark of shingle sawyers is a thing

Immensely powerful and ingentuos machinery has been developed to speed the conversion of timber into wood products. Words are inadequate to describe the impact these machines make on a layman but I'll try to convey the impressions and lugs everything built oversize.

With a tremendous clattering, a log about three feet thick and 40 feet long-weighing up to eight tons-bounces into the chamber, is kicked by the lugs in a high arc onto the rotating spindles which make it birl a fantastic jig.

(The operator, just to demonstrate his control over the huge log, made it leap about like a toothpick--producing an eeric incongruity for human senses. Our eyes told us the porpoising log must be some super-light balsa wood. But our ears and the shock-shaken floor under our feet told us ertainty weighed many tons.)

Another set of lugs, kicked the log out of the chamber

In came another log from the right, and this time the operator demonstrated the terrifying power of the water jet. Stopping the spindles so that the log did not revolve, he zipped the nozzle down the log-splitting it lengthwise in half!

And that, dear reader, is a Bellingham barker-mighty enough even for Paul Bunyan.

We toured the pulp and paper mill, plywood mill, saw mill and shingle mill-but that was only part of the MBPR complex in the valley.

All told, the company has about 4,000 employees in the complex who receive $25 million in pay each year while processing about 600 million log feet of timber which sell for about $163 million annually, mostly in the export market.

When the current expansion programs in several of the plants are completed this year, the whole shebang will represent almost $200 million-worth of capital investment,

Running the whole show is J. R. Forrest (and everyone does call him Jack) who was born and raised in the valley and went to work as an ordinary hourly-paid sawmill hand after the Second World War (following one year at University of B.C. as a returned veteran.)

Likeable, hard-working and diligently pursuing short courses In training, he worked up to foreman, general foreman, production superintendent, plant manager and now area manager

At 47, he represents another aspect of the technological revo-ion in the industry—youthful personnel.

Young men with ability move up the ladder very quickly -at all levels-just now because the industry is growing at a dizzy pace. There are simply too many openings proliferating to fill them with seasoned veterans on a more-or-less senority sys-

This was not only evident at the top, but also at the workingman's level. The million-dollar machinery of the pulp plant, for instance, was operated in the main by youths in their twenties.

A paper maker trainee, for example, can move up by hiring on at a new pulp mill (they've been opening in batches for the past few years and about a dozen more are in the works for the province) in a higher category. The same opportunity develops when his own plant expands,

It's possible for a high school graduate to work up to a No. 1 papermaker position-and a wage of about $1,000 a month by the time he's in his mid-twenties.

This facet of the business will become more pronounced as the new mills now under construction search for personnel.

Another quiet revolution of the industry is taking place on the forest floor itself—management of tree plantations by professional foresters who are improving on nature through planting programs (both hand and helicopter-seeding), spacing schedules, thinning programs to give good trees an even better chance to grow, fertilization experiments and introduction of new species.

This new aspect won't his visible to the present generation—but the next one will see the benefits in an enormously increased productivity from B.C.'s forest lands, nming up the tour, I'd say I gained a new appreciation for All-Sooke's logging sports festical. It's a living museum in which you can see the sweat-and-strain techniques that you will never find in the woods again.
